(U). This EXSUM is self-initiated. In the aftermath of Sunday's confrontation between BATF Agents and cult members in Waco, Texas, federal military support was requested by both BATF and the FBI. Support furnished consisted of two UH-1 helicopters, from Ft Hood, loaned to the FBI to assist in the tactical deployment of the FBI's Hostage Response Team and 10 Bradley Fighting Vehicles, from the Texas ARNG, to the BATF for defensive use. Equipment loans were approved by the Acting ASA (IL&E) and were made under the provision of the Economy Act. In addition to this equipment, FORSCOM has loaned 100 sets of NVGs to federal agents. HEADLINE: 4 FEDERAL AGENTS KILLED IN SHOOTOUT WITH CULT IN TEXAS; VIOLENCE: FIFTEEN OFFICERS ARE INJURED AFTER THEY ARRIVE TO SEARCH ARMED COMPOUND. AT LEAST ONE SECT MEMBER IS DEAD; SEVERAL ARE HURT. STANDOFF CONTINUES INTO NIGHT.

BYLINE: By J. MICHAEL KENNEDY and CATHLEEN DECKER, TIMES STAFF WRITERS

DATELINE: WACO, Tex.

BODY: Federal agents attempting to serve search warrants on a heavily armed religious camp near here early Sunday were ambushed by raging gunfire that left four of them dead and 15 others injured, several seriously. About 45 minutes after the automatic weapons fire began, a cease-fire was negotiated by surviving agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and the cult's leader, a 33-year-old guitarist and ninth-grade dropout who is said to believe that he is Jesus Christ. Shortly after nightfall, however, gunfire blazed anew as three members of the cult, known as the Branch Davidians, tried to storm an ATF observation post outside the fortified yet primitive religious compound. One cult member was confirmed dead, a second was believed killed and a third was taken into custody, according to officials at ATF headquarters in Washington. Cult leader David Koresh said in a telephone interview with Cable News Network that a 2-year-old child had been killed in the first confrontation but that could not be confirmed. Several others were injured, including Koresh, who said he had been shot in the abdomen.

Late in the evening, as negotiations between federal officials and the cult leaders continued, four children were released from the compound. ATF spokesman Jack Killorin said the release followed the broadcast of a taped message from Koresh on a Waco radio station. Up to 100 people were believed to remain inside. Ted Royster, special agent in charge of the ATF's Dallas office, held back tears as he gave reporters an account of the ambush.

"We had planned this operation for quite a while," he said. "It appears they knew we were coming. . . . We had our plan down. We had our diversion down, all of which went into effect. They were waiting."

As night fell, scores of ATF agents still surrounded the 77-acre site, which is about 10 miles east of Waco in Central Texas and serves as headquarters for the cult, which splintered from a group that itself split from the Seventh-day Adventist Church in Los Angeles 60 years ago. ,

"The people inside are very aware of any outside movement," Royster said. "They are very jittery of outside movement."

Koresh defended himself in the CNN telephone interview late Sunday. He also blamed the confrontation on federal agents.

"They fired on us first," he said. ". . . The bullets started coming into the door, and the young men (inside the compound) started firing on them. I said, 'There's women and children here.' "

Late Sunday, police officials in the Southern California community of La Verne confirmed that Koresh was the subject of an ongoing child molestation investigation that began in 1991. At the time, Koresh was living in La Verne with 18 women, some of them described as his wives.

La Verne police Sgt. John Hackworth said that the investigation centered on allegations that Koresh was having sex with girls as young as 12. The probe was hampered by the reluctance of cult members to become involved, he said. "There was difficulty obtaining cooperation from the victims, who had been told that the man molesting them was Christ," Hackworth said. All told, Sunday was the bloodiest day in the 21-year history of the ATF, a division of the Treasury Department that enforces laws involving guns, explosives, alcohol, arson and tobacco. About 120 agents of the ATF and its predecessor agencies have been killed in the line of duty since Prohibition, according to an agency spokesman.

THE FIREFIGHT

The dead and wounded agents were part of a bloc of about 100 that swarmed onto the religious compound about 9:30 a.m. Sunday, preparing to search the property for weapons and explosives and hoping to arrest Koresh. But witnesses to the fierce battle that followed described an exchange almost unbelievable in its lethal swiftness and overwhelming firepower. Royster said that the three helicopters and assorted ground assault forces came under fire within minutes of their arrival. Royster himself was in one of the helicopters when it was fired upon from the ground. Television reporter John McLemore of KWTX, who was there to cover the serving of the search warrants, said the gunfire remained constant from the first shots until the cease-fire 45 minutes later.

Bullets ricocheted everywhere, and fallen agents begged the television crew to call for ambulances, McLemore told CNN. As he retreated to his vehicle, shots pierced it.

"I don't think anybody could have imagined the kind of artillery inside this compound," McLemore said. ". . . There were people dropping left and right." Two of the agents killed were on a roof and one was on the ground. Royster did not know the location of the fourth dead officer. The assault by those inside the compound came without warning, officials said. The weaponry used ,

was largely automatic and ranged up to .50 caliber, ATF spokesman Killorin said. After the cease-fire agreement was reached, the less seriously wounded of the agents began pulling out companions who could not move under their own power. Hospital officials said late

D-1374

Sunday that the condition of the wounded agents ranged from stable to critical, with the injuries including gunshot wounds and broken bones.

THE FORTRESS

Royster described the sect's grounds as primitive. There was little if any electricity, he said, no running water and no indoor plumbing for the cult members. But there apparently were underground passages.

In a story published Saturday, the Waco Tribune-Herald characterized the cult as heavily armed with high-powered weapons and said they lived at the behest of their eccentric leader.

Included in the arsenal, the newspaper said, were military assault weapons such as AK-47s and AR-15s. Koresh, who formerly went by the name Vernon Howell, told the Associated Press on Saturday that all of the group's weapons were "regular, legally bought."

"If the Bible is true, then I'm Christ," he told the newspaper. "But so what? Look at 2,000 years ago. What's so great about being Christ? A man nailed to the cross. A man of sorrow acquainted with grief. You know, being Christ ain't nothing. Know what I mean?"

The newspaper said that it spent eight months probing Koresh and his followers and quoted an Australian private detective who had investigated them for two years as saying Howell abused children and boasted of having sex with underage members.

According to the newspaper, welfare officials twice had visited the cult compound to question children, who told them that there was a bus buried on the grounds to serve as an underground shelter. The officials found no evidence of child abuse.

Royster said that the bureau's investigation also had begun eight months ago, and the move Sunday was not prompted by the article in the Waco newspaper. "We had reports from the public and from law enforcement that these people were potential problems," Royster said. "They were a threat to the public safety of the people of Waco." THE CULT

According to Shirley Burton, director of communications for the Seventh-day Adventist church, the sect central to Sunday's shooting originated in 1929, when a disaffected Bulgarian immigrant named Victor Houteff was dismissed from the church "because of his bizarre beliefs and his lifestyle." No specifics were available, Burton said.

Dubbing his following the Shepherd's Rod, Houteff set up shop in Los Angeles but moved to Waco in 1935.

Houteff and his wife, Florence, controlled the group for the next two decades. The next split was precipitated when Florence Houteff predicted that the restoration of the biblical David's kingdom in Palestine, to which the group aspired, would occur in April of 1959.

When that did not come to pass, most members cast their lot with a Houteff rival, Ben Roden, who called his sect the Branch Davidians.

In 1978, when Roden died, his wife, Lois, took over. Six years later, another split occurred as members were forced to choose between Roden's son George and another leader, then known as Vernon Howell and today known as David Koresh. Animosity between the two men flared into a gun battle in 1987. Afterward, seven Koresh partisans were acquitted of attempted murder charges. Koresh's trial ended in a mistrial, and charges against him were later dismissed. Officials of the Seventh-day Adventist Church took pains on Sunday to distance themselves from the cult, noting that there was never an official connection between the two groups.

HEADLINE: 4 Agents Killed, 16 Hurt in Raid on Cult; Standoff Ensues at Texas Site

SERIES: Occasional

BODY: Four federal agents were killed and 16 other agents were injured yesterday during a gun battle that erupted when more than 100 law enforcement officers began a long-planned raid on the compound of a heavily armed religious cult near Waco, Tex.

After a morning firefight, which witnesses said lasted between 30 and 45 minutes, the federal agents negotiated a cease-fire with the cult members, enabling the government officers to remove the dead and wounded agents from the compound.

In the evening, a second gunfight broke out as three men from the sect apparently fired on three agents at a police observation post near the compound. A federal official said one member of the sect was killed, a second was wounded, and a third was taken prisoner by police. A 2-year-old child also was dead inside the compound, according to the sect's leader. The standoff continued early this morning as federal and local police officers ringed the 77-acre headquarters of the religious cult, which calls itself the Branch Davidians. Federal agents told reporters they would negotiate with the cult members for as long as possible but did not rule out further use of force.

Several hundred federal and local police were on the scene and federal officials described negotiations as "difficult."

In a telephone interview last night broadcast live on CNN, the group's leader, Vernon Howell, who began calling himself David Koresh two years ago, said he and several other adults had been wounded. He later told a Dallas radio station, "I'm bleeding bad."

In a rambling telephone conversation begun by Howell with CNN amid the standoff, the cult leader said he would begin releasing children two at a time if a local radio station played his religious message. Howell, said to believe he is Jesus Christ, suggested in the CNN conversation that he thinks he has unique knowledge to interpret the Bible, especially the Book of Revelation. Late last night, Howell began permitting children to leave the compound. Among them was a little boy in a cowboy hat who waved to police and reporters ,

watching as a caravan of eight vehicles moved down a gravel road away from the property in a pouring rain. Some older people were in other cars. Howell, in a shaking voice, had told a Waco radio station he was resting on blankets soaked with blood from wounds to his abdomen and arm. He said he wanted to release the children last night so his grandchildren could spread the gospel. Officials said they believed

Howell had released eight children by midnight, when a convoy of 11 police vehicles headed up the gravel road toward the compound. One person in the convoy identified the group as a hostage negotiating team from Austin. The team was equipped with radios and was towing several spotlights.

By 1 a.m. today, another 11 vehicles, some stenciled "SWAT" for special weapons and tactics, had joined the negotiating team.

The first shootout started sometime after 9 a.m. yesterday, when about 100 officers -- agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (ATF) and local police forces -- were preparing to raid the compound. They intended to arrest heavily armed members of the Branch Davidians, a religious group that split from the Seventh-Day Adventist Church more than 60 years ago. Federal agents were using helicopters to back up the group assault on the fortified cluster of buildings, a raid that had been planned for months, officials said. "As soon as they saw us, they opened fire," said Ted Royster, ATF agent in charge. Royster said it appeared that members were "waiting for us." But Howell said in the television interview that agents fired on church members first.

Two of the agents were killed on the roof of the main building during the assault and one was killed on the ground. ATF officials said they did not know where the fourth was killed.

An ATF spokesman said the agents intended to arrest Howell for illegal possession of fully automatic firearms and explosive devices. The agents also had a warrant to search for military-style assault rifles, machine guns, grenades and parts of explosive devices.

On Saturday, the Waco Tribune-Herald began a seven-part series of articles about Howell and his followers, reporting that they had stockpiled a large arsenal of high-powered weapons and that Howell and others had sexually abused members' children. The newspaper said Howell had claimed to have at least 15 wives.

Although Howell was quoted as denying various charges, he also said, "We're doing what we're doing, and nobody's going to stop us." Howell, 33, also reportedly said, "If the Bible is true, then I'm Christ. But so what? Look at 2,000 years ago. What's so great about being Christ? A man nailed to the cross"

At least 75 men, women and children lived at the camp about 10 miles northeast of Waco in an area known as Mount Carmel, although Howell said in the CNN interview that there were far more than 75 in the compound. ,

Federal officials had planned a surprise attack to occur just after cult members broke from a Sunday morning service, when the men moved, without weapons, to various locations on the compound to do chores.

But as agents approached the entrance of the multi-storied compound, which has a watchtower, they immediately came under fire.

One of the ATF officials said that the cult members apparently had been tipped to the strategy, which was based on a months-long investigation of the cult and its compound. Howell told CNN he indeed had known the agents were coming to arrest him.

"They came under heavy and sustained firepower for over half an hour," said ATF spokesman John C. Killorin. "We were literally trying to move into position when they opened fire."

Reporters near the scene at the time said the agents had parked their vehicles right in front of the main building and were trying to get in a front gate when the shooting started.

A high-level ATF source said law enforcement officials had ruled out ringing the compound from a distance in favor of the direct assault that resulted in the four deaths and many wounded.

"The difficulty in this operation is that the group posed a threat not only to the community but also to themselves," the ATF official said, adding that if agents set up a good distance from the facility, Howell's followers might kill themselves, as happened in the 1978 Jonestown massacre in the tiny South American nation of Guyana. Nearly 1,000 followers of the Rev. Jim Jones died after drinking poison or were murdered by fellow adherents. The mass suicide occurred after a group investigating Jonestown led by Rep. Leo Ryan (D-Calif.) was attacked by some of Jones's lieutenants. Several, including Ryan, were killed.

About a half an hour into the morning firefight, agents were able to establish contact with the cult leaders and negotiated the cease-fire. Rick Bradfield, news director at the local television station, KWTX-TV, said one of the station's reporters used his Ford Bronco to drive "four or five wounded agents out from the area. One was on the hood, some hanging onto the back bumper."

Ambulances were coming and going, he said. Hospitals reported that they had called in all levels of personnel to deal with the carnage and the local Red Cross was seeking blood donors.

Two agents were pronounced dead upon arrival at Hillcrest Baptist Medical Center. Another agent died at the hospital. The fourth agent was taken to and died at Providence Hospital. Other officers were being treated at both hospitals for large-caliber gunshot wounds.

The ATF last night identified the dead agents as Steve Willis, 32, of Houston; Robert J. Williams, 26, of Little Rock, Ark.; and Conway LaBleu, 30, and Todd McKeehan, 28, both of New Orleans.

The second confrontation began about 6 p.m. when sect members emerged from a building, headed toward the agents and began firing, according to ATF officials. They said agents returned fire, killing one sect member, wounding another and capturing the third.

When Howell made his phone call to CNN about two hours later, he did not mention the incident. He quoted heavily from scripture and refused to answer specific questions about what was going on inside the buildings. In describing the morning assault, he said, "They started firing at me I fell back in the doorway and we started firing back at them." Howell also said that the several adults who were wounded did not want to leave his company.

"Nobody wants to listen to my doctrine," he said of outsiders.

The Branch Davidians were founded in California about 60 years ago and moved in 1935 to Waco. The Texas community of 160,000 people is the home of Baylor University, run by Southern Baptists.

Howell, who joined the Branch Davidians in 1980, took control in 1987. The sect's violent ways have made news before. In 1987, several of its members got into a gun brawl over its leadership. Howell and seven other cult members were accused of attempted murder. The seven reportedly were acquitted; charges against Howell were dismissed after a mistrial. Several months ago, ATF received information that the Branch Davidians were accumulating machine guns and explosives, ATF officials said. The general public is prohibited from possessing automatic weapons. ATF officials said they prepared for yesterday's raid after receiving additional information about the level of stockpiling at the compound and hearing that Howell and others were making inflammatory statements. The officials also said they thought the group might take action after the newspaper series started because they heard the articles would be critical of the sect. One source said the raid had been scheduled for today but was moved up 24 hours at the last minute.

Bob Lott, editor of the Waco Tribune-Herald, said yesterday that about a month ago an ATF official had asked the newspaper to delay publication of the series. "We waited about a month for other considerations, but we also listened to their concerns." Lott said.

"I don't believe the publication of the series was the stimulus," Lott said in a telephone interview. In a prepared statement he had said, "After several days of careful consideration at the newspaper, we decided it was time to let the public know of this menace just outside our city." Staff writer Mary Jordan and special correspondents Michael Williamson and Erin Redmond contributed to this report from Waco.

BODY: The Branch Davidians of Waco, Texas, looked to a 33-year-old ninth-grade dropout, part-time car mechanic, songwriter and accused child abuser as Christ, and Vernon Howell did not deny he pretended to be the lamb of God. "If the Bible is true, then I'm Christ," Mr.

Mr. Howell had said he was divinely inspired, could summon the end of the world described in the biblical book of Revelations and was here to "teach the perfect harmony of the Bible and all the prophecies." He had emerged as the leader of a heavily armed, isolated extended family of 75 persons, including more than two dozen children. It was the residue of a Depression-era religious sect that once had several thousand followers. One unidentified former cult member told the Waco newspaper the group has .50-caliber weapons, AK-47s, AR-15s, assault rifles and 9mm handguns. Mr. Howell said in an interview Saturday that his group has "regular, legally bought" guns. "Do we not have the right to bear arms?" attempted-murder charge against him, Mr. Howell, a rock guitarist, wrote a song saying: "Please won't you listen/ It's not what it appears to be/ We didn't want to hurt anybody/ Just set our old people free." Mr. Howell is the latest leader of a religious group founded by a renegade member of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. The Seventh-day Adventists, whose teachings are at wide variance from Howell's taste for rock music and beer, for example, long ago disavowed the sect as apostate. Bill Pitts, a religion professor at Baylor University, which is affiliated with the Southern Baptists, has written several papers on the Branch Davidians, and he calls the sect's theological views - especially its interpretation of the book of Revelation - in conflict with the teachings of the Seventh-day Adventists. The Davidian Seventh-day Adventists were founded during the 1930s by a Bulgarian named Victor Houteff who immigrated to the Southwest in the early years of the century. He named the group the Davidian Seventh-day Adventists in 1942 because he believed the restoration of David's kingdom in Palestine was ,

In the 1950s, a splinter group - the Branch Davidians - was founded in Odessa, Texas, by Benjamin Roden and his wife, Lois. Their sect gathered a few thousand members.

In April 1959, the Davidians put out a worldwide message predicting the Second Coming was at hand. Nearly 1,000 people sold all possessions and gathered in a tent city east of Waco to await the grim events that never came. The group's supporters trickled away.

The Rodens' son George headed the remnants of the sect until 1987, when he was challenged by Davidians led by Mr. Howell. That dispute turned violent after Mr. Howell said Mr. Roden had no right to administer the sect's 77-acre compound with homes and outbuildings 10 miles west of Waco. Mr. Roden was wounded after a lengthy gunbattle involving automatic weapons in November 1987. His power waned, along with his sanity. He is in a mental institution, acquitted of an unrelated murder by reason of insanity. Mr. Howell and seven of his supporters were arrested after that battle, and he was charged with attempted murder. The seven others were acquitted, and a mistrial was declared in the case of Mr. Howell. Charges were later dismissed. Since then, the behavior of Mr. Howell has been questioned by investigators, but the cult has kept a relatively low profile. "About three years ago we had a complaint, but our conclusion was we didn't have enough to proceed with a state case at that time," said Paul Gartner, former district attorney in Waco.

The charges came from a private detective hired by a family whose daughter had fled the group's compound.

The detective, who investigated the group for 2 1/2 years, alleged that Mr. Howell had committed child abuse and bragged about having sex with underage members of the group. The cult leader also allegedly claimed to have at least 15 wives and believed all women in the world belong to him. * This article is based in part on wire service reports.

HEADLINE: Cult hoards high-powered arms awaiting world's end

BYLINE: Associated Press

DATELINE: WACO, Texas

BODY: A heavily armed religious cult, followers of a guitar-playing, beer-drinking leader who says he is Christ, is awaiting the end of the world in a compound near Waco, a newspaper reported Saturday.

A group of about 75 Branch Davidians, an offshoot of the Seventh-day Adventist Church that moved its base here from Los Angeles in 1935, is known to have a large arsenal of high-powered weapons, the Waco Tribune-Herald said. An Australian private detective who has investigated the group for 2 1/2 years alleged its latest leader, Vernon Howell, abuses the children of his followers, boasts of having sex with underage members, claims at least 15 wives and believes all women in the world belong to him. Howell denies the accusations and said he has had only two children. He and his wife, Rachel, were married in 1984 when he was 24 and she was 14. "If the Bible is true, then I'm Christ," Howell, 33, told the newspaper. "But so what? Look at 2,000 years ago. What's so great about being Christ? A man nailed to the cross. A man of sorrow acquainted with grief. You know, being Christ ain't nothing. Know what I mean?" The newspaper said it spent eight months investigating the cult, including talking to more than 20 former members.

One of them, Robyn Bunds, said Howell boasted of having sex with one of his 12-year-old followers.

Others say he is the father of many of the cult's children, citing numerous birth certificates with no father listed.

The detective, Geoffrey Hossack, said he was hired by a group of former cult members who fled to Australia. He presented his findings to McLennan County authorities in 1990, but no action was taken.

Children's Protective Services reported finding no evidence of child abuse and took no action, the newspaper quoted sources as saying.

PAGE 18 Chicago Tribune, February 28, 1993

The newspaper said the group has military-type assault weapons - one unidentified former cult member said it has .50-caliber weapons, AK-47s, AR-15s, Israeli assault rifles and 9 mm handguns.

AGREEMENT FOR THE LOAN OF US ARMY MATERIEL

For use of this form, see AR 700-131; the proponent agency is DCSLOG

This loan agreement is entered into, by, and between the United States of America, hereinafter called 'the lender,' represented by (b) USPF 40 FOR TEXAS ~~TEXAS ARMY NATIONAL GUARD~~ for the purpose of entering into this agreement, and (a) FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION hereinafter called 'the borrower,' represented by (c) ITC WUSTLA ~~ITC WUSTLA~~ hereinafter called 'the borrower,' represented by (c) ITC WUSTLA ~~ITC WUSTLA~~ for the purpose of entering into this agreement.

1. PURPOSE Under the authority of (d) AR 700-138 the lender hereby lends to the borrower and the borrower hereby borrows from the lender the Government materiel, hereinafter called 'the materiel,' listed and described in Exhibit 1 hereto attached and incorporated by reference into the terms of this agreement, which materiel is required by the borrower for (e) FBI HOSTAGE RESCUE TEAM, LOAN OF 10 BRADLEY Fighting VEHICLES, M2.

2. TERM. This loan of materiel is intended to meet a temporary need covered by federal law. The borrower will keep the materiel only for the period of (f) 1 MARCH 93 - 31 MARCH (not to exceed 90 days). Loans may be renewed, if justified, and requested by the borrower and approved by the lender. Nevertheless, the lender may revoke and terminate this agreement and demand return of the materiel in whole or in part at any time.

CONDITIONS. This agreement is predicated upon the following conditions:

a. The LENDER will make every effort to ensure that each item of the materiel is furnished to the BORROWER in a serviceable and usable condition according to its originally intended purpose. However, if the use for which the materiel is loaned will permit, materiel of a lesser condition will be loaned. This lesser condition will be noted on the appropriate loan documents. Nevertheless, the LENDER makes no warranty or guarantee of fitness of any of the materiel for any of the materiel for a particular purpose or use, or warranty of any type whatsoever.

b. This agreement covers only the specific federally owned National Guard property particularly described in Appendix A (description will cover actual condition of property and is as uniquely descriptive terms as possible, such as motor number or model number) attached hereto and made a part thereof.

c. The National Guard assumes no liability for personal injury or property damage resulting from use of property on loan and hereby provides the property 'as is' and makes no other warranties as to fitness for particular purpose or otherwise.

d. Property will be inspected jointly by the LENDER and the BORROWER before acceptance by the BORROWER at the time of pickup and before acceptance by the LENDER at the time of return. A description of the actual condition of the property loaned is indicated in Appendix A. However, the property will be available 'as is' at ITC AIRPORT on 1 MARCH 1993.

e. In event of loss, damage, or destruction representing the LENDER will be notified immediately by the BORROWER.

f. The required organizational maintenance will be performed before releasing equipment to the BORROWER, if parts are available (see item 3d).

g. The BORROWER will appoint a representative for the purpose of making joint inspection and inventory of all materiel when the BORROWER physically picks up or returns the borrowed materiel. Upon pickup (or receipt after shipment) of the borrowed materiel, the accounting officer of the borrowing activity (or his authorized representative) will sign the appropriate documents acknowledging receipt and possession of the materiel. Upon return of the materiel to the LENDER, the BORROWER will certify that "the quantities listed in the shipping document (loan) are correct." In instances where BORROWER representatives authorized to receive and sign for borrowed materiel are not available when the materiel is delivered, all claims for costs related to the loan will be valid.

h. The BORROWER is responsible for care and maintenance of borrowed materiel during the term of the loan. The borrower will provide sufficient personnel and facilities to adequately operate, maintain, protect, and secure the borrowed materiel. The borrower will maintain the materiel in a serviceable condition and ascertain that it is returned to the LENDER in as good a condition as when it was loaned (fair wear and tear excepted). Equipment will be returned to LENDER in accordance with 10/20 series TM maintenance standards. Records of maintenance performed will be turned in to LENDER with the borrowed equipment.

i. The BORROWER will store, safeguard, and secure high value items, or arms in a manner consistent with common practice, public law, and local regulations.

j. The borrower will prevent misuse of borrowed materiel; or its use by unauthorized persons.

k. The BORROWER agrees to indemnify the LENDER, any agent of the LENDER, and the STATE OF TEXAS in the event of any loss, damage, or destruction of property that results in pecuniary charges against the LENDER, its agent, or the State of Texas imposed pursuant to 32 U.S.C. 710 as implemented by AR/ARNG regulations.

l. Military BORROWERS will perform and pay for costs of maintenance service prescribed in official publications applicable to particular items including any preservation, replacement, and/or repairs incident to the loan.

m. A record of gasoline consumed, oil added, and repairs made, including parts replaced will be furnished to the LENDER upon return of the equipment. The LENDER will ensure that fuel tanks of vehicles and other POL-consuming equipment are full at time of the loan, and the BORROWER will fill fuel tanks at time of return.

n. Equipment log books/forms will remain in custody of the LENDER.

o. Property will remain on the property records of the LENDER supported by a receipt from the BORROWER and the original copy of this loan agreement.

g. The BORROWER will neither make nor permit any modification, removal or alteration of any borrowed material except with permission of the approving authority for the loan. The BORROWER will not cannibalize the borrowed material. All serial numbered items to include radios must be returned to lender and not substitutions.

f. The BORROWER will not mortgage, pledge, assign, transfer, sublet, or part with possession of any borrowed material in any manner to any third party either directly or indirectly except with the prior written approval of the lender.

e. At all times the lender shall have free access to all loaned material for the purpose of inspecting or inventorying it.

A raid on a compound 20 miles east of Waco, Texas. The compound, belonging to a heavily armed religious cult, was suspected of producing Methamphetamine drugs and weapons.

The operation was planned by Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms (ATF) in coordination with Operation Alliance, JTF-6, and the Texas National Guard providing operational support. The raid has been in the planning stages for about two months. Operational training of ATF agents in raid procedures was conducted by JTF-6 at Fort Hood, Texas. A National Guard C-26 assisted in Intel gathering about one and a half months ago.

The operation staging area is Texas State Technical College and Airfield. At about 1000 hours on 28 February 1993, the operation kicked off with about 90 ATF agents involved in the ground assault. At about 30 yards from the main complex, agents received heavy fire. As a result, 4 agents were killed and 16 were wounded. The agents then went into a defensive posture and negotiated a cease-fire after a 45 minute fire fight.

In support of the operation (initially) were three National Guard helicopters, 1 UH-60 Command and Control Aerial Platform, 2 RAID helicopters, providing communication and observations. All three received hits by weapons fire while approximately 400 - 450 yards from the building; three rounds hit the UH-60, three rounds in one RAID A/C, and one hit on the other. The A/C were hit by what appeared to be 7.62 rounds.

National Guard support consisted of eight Aviation and nine ground support personnel. Ground Support consisted of a bus, a water trailer, and a 2 1/2 ton truck with tents for base camps.

There were no National Guard casualties.

Other Information:

- o ATF tracked weapons part shipment made through UPS.
- o There appeared to be a leak of the operation by a newspaper reporter
- o About 75 people in main building - 50 women and

- children and 25 men who are all armed
- o They are believed to possess a 50 cal. machine gun or larger
- o 10 Bradley vehicles were loaned to the LEAs
 - 9 arrived at about 0115 on 1 March
 - 1 arrived at about 0300 on 1 MarchDriver's Training was completed at 0530.
- o The Bradley's will move forward to within 200 yards of objective area at day-light
- o 2 UH-1 helicopters were loaned to the FBI for hostage evacuation. Crew Chiefs were needed but once mission becomes hot crew chiefs will not take part. Pilots will be FBI agents.

As of 0600, 3 children had been released from the compound. The leader, David Keresh, agreed to release the children by two's each time he has granted access to the local radio stations. The total number of children in the compound is not known.

The Texas National Guard was providing support in accordance with their approved State Plan (approved by OSD), and IAW NGR 500-2 National Guard Counterdrug Support to Law Enforcement Agencies.

The status of personnel is Title 32 as all Counterdrug Support missions are performed.

Missions approved in the Texas National Guard State Plan for Counterdrug Support and provided in support of ATF:

- Mission 04 - Aerial Reconnaissance
- Mission 05 - Aerial Surveillance
- Mission 14 - Admin/Intel/Commo Support

Rules of Engagement for National Guard personnel in support of the operations are as extracted from NGR 500-2, at Enclosure.

The helicopters were hit at 400-450 yards from building while airborne.

Information received as of 1000 hours on 01 Mar 93:

- o ATF have signed for the TX National Guard Bradley Fighting Vehicles

Information contained herein was consolidated from that received at the ARNG Operations Center and NGB Counterdrug Task Force.

HEADLINE: 4 FEDERAL AGENTS KILLED IN SHOOTOUT WITH CULT IN TEXAS; VIOLENCE: FIFTEEN OFFICERS ARE INJURED AFTER THEY ARRIVE TO SEARCH ARMED COMPOUND. AT LEAST ONE SECT MEMBER IS DEAD; SEVERAL ARE HURT. STANDOFF CONTINUES INTO NIGHT.

BODY: Federal agents attempting to serve search warrants on a heavily armed religious camp near here early Sunday were ambushed by raging gunfire that left four of them dead and 15 others injured, several seriously. About 45 minutes after the automatic weapons fire began, a cease-fire was negotiated by surviving agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and the cult's leader, a 33-year-old guitarist and ninth-grade dropout who is said to believe that he is Jesus Christ. Shortly after nightfall, however, gunfire blazed anew as three members of the cult, known as the Branch Davidians, tried to storm an ATF observation post outside the fortified yet primitive religious compound. One cult member was confirmed dead, a second was believed killed and a third was taken into custody, according to officials at ATF headquarters in Washington. Cult leader David Koresh said in a telephone interview with Cable News Network that a 2-year-old child had been killed in the first confrontation but that could not be confirmed. Several others were injured, including Koresh, who said he had been shot in the abdomen.

Late in the evening, as negotiations between federal officials and the cult leaders continued, four children were released from the compound. ATF spokesman Jack Killorin said the release followed the broadcast of a taped message from Koresh on a Waco radio station. Up to 100 people were believed to remain inside. Ted Royster, special agent in charge of the ATF's Dallas office, held back tears as he gave reporters an account of the ambush.

"We had planned this operation for quite a while," he said. "It appears they knew we were coming. . . . We had our plan down. We had our diversion down, all of which went into effect. They were waiting."

As night fell, scores of ATF agents still surrounded the 77-acre site, which is about 10 miles east of Waco in Central Texas and serves as headquarters for the cult, which splintered from a group that itself split from the Seventh-day Adventist Church in Los Angeles 60 years ago. ,

"The people inside are very aware of any outside movement," Royster said. "They are very jittery of outside movement."

Koresh defended himself in the CNN telephone interview late Sunday. He also blamed the confrontation on federal agents.

"They fired on us first," he said. ". . . The bullets started coming into the door, and the young men (inside the compound) started firing on them. I said, 'There's women and children here.' "

Late Sunday, police officials in the Southern California community of La Verne confirmed that Koresh was the subject of an ongoing child molestation investigation that began in 1991. At the time, Koresh was living in La Verne with 18 women, some of them described as his wives.

La Verne police Sgt. John Hackworth said that the investigation centered on allegations that Koresh was having sex with girls as young as 12. The probe was hampered by the reluctance of cult members to become involved, he said. "There was difficulty obtaining cooperation from the victims, who had been told that the man molesting them was Christ," Hackworth said. All told, Sunday was the bloodiest day in the 21-year history of the ATF, a division of the Treasury Department that enforces laws involving guns, explosives, alcohol, arson and tobacco. About 120 agents of the ATF and its predecessor agencies have been killed in the line of duty since Prohibition, according to an agency spokesman.

THE FIREFIGHT

The dead and wounded agents were part of a bloc of about 100 that swarmed onto the religious compound about 9:30 a.m. Sunday, preparing to search the property for weapons and explosives and hoping to arrest Koresh. But witnesses to the fierce battle that followed described an exchange almost unbelievable in its lethal swiftness and overwhelming firepower. Royster said that the three helicopters and assorted ground assault forces came under fire within minutes of their arrival. Royster himself was in one of the helicopters when it was fired upon from the ground. Television reporter John McLemore of KWTX, who was there to cover the serving of the search warrants, said the gunfire remained constant from the first shots until the cease-fire 45 minutes later.

Bullets ricocheted everywhere, and fallen agents begged the television crew to call for ambulances, McLemore told CNN. As he retreated to his vehicle, shots pierced it.

"I don't think anybody could have imagined the kind of artillery inside this compound," McLemore said. ". . . There were people dropping left and right." Two of the agents killed were on a roof and one was on the ground. Royster did not know the location of the fourth dead officer. The assault by those inside the compound came without warning, officials said. The weaponry used ,

was largely automatic and ranged up to .50 caliber, ATF spokesman Killorin said. After the cease-fire agreement was reached, the less seriously wounded of the agents began pulling out companions who could not move under their own power. Hospital officials said late

Sunday that the condition of the wounded agents ranged from stable to critical, with the injuries including gunshot wounds and broken bones.

THE FORTRESS

Royster described the sect's grounds as primitive. There was little if any electricity, he said, no running water and no indoor plumbing for the cult members. But there apparently were underground passages.

In a story published Saturday, the Waco Tribune-Herald characterized the cult as heavily armed with high-powered weapons and said they lived at the behest of their eccentric leader.

Included in the arsenal, the newspaper said, were military assault weapons such as AK-47s and AR-15s. Koresh, who formerly went by the name Vernon Howell, told the Associated Press on Saturday that all of the group's weapons were "regular, legally bought."

"If the Bible is true, then I'm Christ," he told the newspaper. "But so what? Look at 2,000 years ago. What's so great about being Christ? A man nailed to the cross. A man of sorrow acquainted with grief. You know, being Christ ain't nothing. Know what I mean?"

The newspaper said that it spent eight months probing Koresh and his followers and quoted an Australian private detective who had investigated them for two years as saying Howell abused children and boasted of having sex with underage members.

According to the newspaper, welfare officials twice had visited the cult compound to question children, who told them that there was a bus buried on the grounds to serve as an underground shelter. The officials found no evidence of child abuse.

Royster said that the bureau's investigation also had begun eight months ago, and the move Sunday was not prompted by the article in the Waco newspaper. "We had reports from the public and from law enforcement that these people were potential problems," Royster said. "They were a threat to the public safety of the people of Waco." THE CULT

According to Shirley Burton, director of communications for the Seventh-day Adventist church, the sect central to Sunday's shooting originated in 1929, when a disaffected Bulgarian immigrant named Victor Houteff was dismissed from the church "because of his bizarre beliefs and his lifestyle." No specifics were available, Burton said.

Dubbing his following the Shepherd's Rod, Houteff set up shop in Los Angeles but moved to Waco in 1935.

Houteff and his wife, Florence, controlled the group for the next two decades. The next split was precipitated when Florence Houteff predicted that the restoration of the biblical David's kingdom in Palestine, to which the group aspired, would occur in April of 1959.

When that did not come to pass, most members cast their lot with a Houteff rival, Ben Roden, who called his sect the Branch Davidians.

In 1978, when Roden died, his wife, Lois, took over. Six years later, another split occurred as members were forced to choose between Roden's son George and another leader, then known as Vernon Howell and today known as David Koresh. Animosity between the two men flared into a gun battle in 1987. Afterward, seven Koresh partisans were acquitted of attempted murder charges. Koresh's trial ended in a mistrial, and charges against him were later dismissed. Officials of the Seventh-day Adventist Church took pains on Sunday to distance themselves from the cult, noting that there was never an official connection between the two groups.

Kennedy reported from Waco and Decker from Los Angeles.

HEADLINE: 4 Agents Killed, 16 Hurt in Raid on Cult; Standoff Ensues at Texas Site

SERIES: Occasional

BODY: Four federal agents were killed and 16 other agents were injured yesterday during a gun battle that erupted when more than 100 law enforcement officers began a long-planned raid on the compound of a heavily armed religious cult near Waco, Tex.

After a morning firefight, which witnesses said lasted between 30 and 45 minutes, the federal agents negotiated a cease-fire with the cult members, enabling the government officers to remove the dead and wounded agents from the compound.

In the evening, a second gunfight broke out as three men from the sect apparently fired on three agents at a police observation post near the compound. A federal official said one member of the sect was killed, a second was wounded, and a third was taken prisoner by police. A 2-year-old child also was dead inside the compound, according to the sect's leader. The standoff continued early this morning as federal and local police officers ringed the 77-acre headquarters of the religious cult, which calls itself the Branch Davidians. Federal agents told reporters they would negotiate with the cult members for as long as possible but did not rule out further use of force.

Several hundred federal and local police were on the scene and federal officials described negotiations as "difficult."

In a telephone interview last night broadcast live on CNN, the group's leader, Vernon Howell, who began calling himself David Koresh two years ago, said he and several other adults had been wounded. He later told a Dallas radio station, "I'm bleeding bad."

In a rambling telephone conversation begun by Howell with CNN amid the standoff, the cult leader said he would begin releasing children two at a time if a local radio station played his religious message. Howell, said to believe he is Jesus Christ, suggested in the CNN conversation that he thinks he has unique knowledge to interpret the Bible, especially the Book of Revelation. Late last night, Howell began permitting children to leave the compound. Among them was a little boy in a cowboy hat who waved to police and reporters ,

watching as a caravan of eight vehicles moved down a gravel road away from the property in a pouring rain. Some older people were in other cars. Howell, in a shaking voice, had told a Waco radio station he was resting on blankets soaked with blood from wounds to his abdomen and arm. He said he wanted to release the children last night so his grandchildren could spread the gospel. Officials said they believed

Howell had released eight children by midnight, when a convoy of 11 police vehicles headed up the gravel road toward the compound. One person in the convoy identified the group as a hostage negotiating team from Austin. The team was equipped with radios and was towing several spotlights.

By 1 a.m. today, another 11 vehicles, some stenciled "SWAT" for special weapons and tactics, had joined the negotiating team.

The first shootout started sometime after 9 a.m. yesterday, when about 100 officers -- agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (ATF) and local police forces -- were preparing to raid the compound. They intended to arrest heavily armed members of the Branch Davidians, a religious group that split from the Seventh-Day Adventist Church more than 60 years ago. Federal agents were using helicopters to back up the group assault on the fortified cluster of buildings, a raid that had been planned for months, officials said. "As soon as they saw us, they opened fire," said Ted Royster, ATF agent in charge. Royster said it appeared that members were "waiting for us." But Howell said in the television interview that agents fired on church members first.

Two of the agents were killed on the roof of the main building during the assault and one was killed on the ground. ATF officials said they did not know where the fourth was killed.

An ATF spokesman said the agents intended to arrest Howell for illegal possession of fully automatic firearms and explosive devices. The agents also had a warrant to search for military-style assault rifles, machine guns, grenades and parts of explosive devices.

On Saturday, the Waco Tribune-Herald began a seven-part series of articles about Howell and his followers, reporting that they had stockpiled a large arsenal of high-powered weapons and that Howell and others had sexually abused members' children. The newspaper said Howell had claimed to have at least 15 wives.

Although Howell was quoted as denying various charges, he also said, "We're doing what we're doing, and nobody's going to stop us." Howell, 33, also reportedly said, "If the Bible is true, then I'm Christ. But so what? Look at 2,000 years ago. What's so great about being Christ? A man nailed to the cross"

At least 75 men, women and children lived at the camp about 10 miles northeast of Waco in an area known as Mount Carmel, although Howell said in the CNN interview that there were far more than 75 in the compound.

Federal officials had planned a surprise attack to occur just after cult members broke from a Sunday morning service, when the men moved, without weapons, to various locations on the compound to do chores.

But as agents approached the entrance of the multi-storied compound, which has a watchtower, they immediately came under fire.

One of the ATF officials said that the cult members apparently had been tipped to the strategy, which was based on a months-long investigation of the cult and its compound. Howell told CNN he indeed had known the agents were coming to arrest him.

"They came under heavy and sustained firepower for over half an hour," said ATF spokesman John C. Killorin. "We were literally trying to move into position when they opened fire."

Reporters near the scene at the time said the agents had parked their vehicles right in front of the main building and were trying to get in a front gate when the shooting started.

A high-level ATF source said law enforcement officials had ruled out ringing the compound from a distance in favor of the direct assault that resulted in the four deaths and many wounded.

"The difficulty in this operation is that the group posed a threat not only to the community but also to themselves," the ATF official said, adding that if agents set up a good distance from the facility, Howell's followers might kill themselves, as happened in the 1978 Jonestown massacre in the tiny South American nation of Guyana. Nearly 1,000 followers of the Rev. Jim Jones died after drinking poison or were murdered by fellow adherents. The mass suicide occurred after a group investigating Jonestown led by Rep. Leo Ryan (D-Calif.) was attacked by some of Jones's lieutenants. Several, including Ryan, were killed.

About a half an hour into the morning firefight, agents were able to establish contact with the cult leaders and negotiated the cease-fire. Rick Bradfield, news director at the local television station, KWTX-TV, said one of the station's reporters used his Ford Bronco to drive "four or five wounded agents out from the area. One was on the hood, some hanging onto the back bumper."

Ambulances were coming and going, he said. Hospitals reported that they had called in all levels of personnel to deal with the carnage and the local Red Cross was seeking blood donors.

Two agents were pronounced dead upon arrival at Hillcrest Baptist Medical Center. Another agent died at the hospital. The fourth agent was taken to and died at Providence Hospital. Other officers were being treated at both hospitals for large-caliber gunshot wounds.

The ATF last night identified the dead agents as Steve Willis, 32, of Houston; Robert J. Williams, 26, of Little Rock, Ark.; and Conway LaBleu, 30, and Todd McKeegan, 28, both of New Orleans.

The second confrontation began about 6 p.m. when sect members emerged from a building, headed toward the agents and began firing, according to ATF officials. They said agents returned fire, killing one sect member, wounding another and capturing the third.

When Howell made his phone call to CNN about two hours later, he did not mention the incident. He quoted heavily from scripture and refused to answer specific questions about what was going on inside the buildings. In describing the morning assault, he said, "They started firing at me I fell back in the doorway and we started firing back at them." Howell also said that the several adults who were wounded did not want to leave his company.

"Nobody wants to listen to my doctrine," he said of outsiders.

The Branch Davidians were founded in California about 60 years ago and moved in 1935 to Waco. The Texas community of 160,000 people is the home of Baylor University, run by Southern Baptists.

Howell, who joined the Branch Davidians in 1980, took control in 1987. The sect's violent ways have made news before. In 1987, several of its members got into a gun brawl over its leadership. Howell and seven other cult members were accused of attempted murder. The seven reportedly were acquitted; charges against Howell were dismissed after a mistrial. Several months ago, ATF received information that the Branch Davidians were accumulating machine guns and explosives, ATF officials said. The general public is prohibited from possessing automatic weapons. ATF officials said they prepared for yesterday's raid after receiving additional information about the level of stockpiling at the compound and hearing that Howell and others were making inflammatory statements. The officials also said they thought the group might take action after the newspaper series started because they heard the articles would be critical of the sect. One source said the raid had been scheduled for today but was moved up 24 hours at the last minute.

Bob Lott, editor of the Waco Tribune-Herald, said yesterday that about a month ago an ATF official had asked the newspaper to delay publication of the series. "We waited about a month for other considerations, but we also listened to their concerns." Lott said.

"I don't believe the publication of the series was the stimulus," Lott said in a telephone interview. In a prepared statement he had said, "After several days of careful consideration at the newspaper, we decided it was time to let the public know of this menace just outside our city." Staff writer Mary Jordan and special correspondents Michael Williamson and Erin Redmond contributed to this report from Waco.

BODY: The Branch Davidians of Waco, Texas, looked to a 33-year-old ninth-grade dropout, part-time car mechanic, songwriter and accused child abuser as Christ, and Vernon Howell did not deny he pretended to be the lamb of God. "If the Bible is true, then I'm Christ," Mr.

Howell told the Waco Tribune-Herald in a story published Saturday. "But so what? Look at 2,000 years ago. What's so great about being Christ? A man nailed to the cross. A man of sorrow acquainted with grief. You know, being Christ ain't nothing." In earlier statements,

Mr. Howell had said he was divinely inspired, could summon the end of the world described in the biblical book of Revelations and was here to "teach the perfect harmony of the Bible and all the prophecies." He had emerged as the leader of a heavily armed, isolated extended family of 75 persons, including more than two dozen children. It was the residue of a Depression-era religious sect that once had several thousand followers. One unidentified former cult member told the Waco newspaper the group has .50-caliber weapons, AK-47s, AR-15s, assault rifles and 9mm handguns. Mr. Howell said in an interview Saturday that his group has "regular, legally bought" guns. "Do we not have the right to bear arms?" Five years ago, when a squabble with a rival leader led to gunplay and an attempted-murder charge against him, Mr. Howell, a rock guitarist, wrote a song saying: "Please won't you listen/ It's not what it appears to be/ We didn't want to hurt anybody/ Just set our old people free." Mr. Howell is the latest leader of a religious group founded by a renegade member of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. The Seventh-day Adventists, whose teachings are at wide variance from Howell's taste for rock music and beer, for example, long ago disavowed the sect as apostate. Bill Pitts, a religion professor at Baylor University, which is affiliated with the Southern Baptists, has written several papers on the Branch Davidians, and he calls the sect's theological views - especially its interpretation of the book of Revelation - in conflict with the teachings of the Seventh-day Adventists. The Davidian Seventh-day Adventists were founded during the 1930s by a Bulgarian named Victor Houteff who immigrated to the Southwest in the early years of the century. He named the group the Davidian Seventh-day Adventists in 1942 because he believed the restoration of David's kingdom in Palestine was,

In April 1959, the Davidians put out a worldwide message predicting the Second Coming was at hand. Nearly 1,000 people sold all possessions and gathered in a tent city east of Waco to await the grim events that never came. The group's supporters trickled away.

The Rodens' son George headed the remnants of the sect until 1987, when he was challenged by Davidians led by Mr. Howell. That dispute turned violent after Mr. Howell said Mr. Roden had no right to administer the sect's 77-acre compound with homes and outbuildings 10 miles west of Waco. Mr. Roden was wounded after a lengthy gunbattle involving automatic weapons in November 1987. His power waned, along with his sanity. He is in a mental institution, acquitted of an unrelated murder by reason of insanity. Mr. Howell and seven of his supporters were arrested after that battle, and he was charged with attempted murder. The seven others were acquitted, and a mistrial was declared in the case of Mr. Howell. Charges were later dismissed. Since then, the behavior of Mr. Howell has been questioned by investigators, but the cult has kept a relatively low profile. "About three years ago we had a complaint, but our conclusion was we didn't have enough to proceed with a state case at that time," said Paul Gartner, former district attorney in Waco.

The charges came from a private detective hired by a family whose daughter had fled the group's compound.

The detective, who investigated the group for 2 1/2 years, alleged that Mr. Howell had committed child abuse and bragged about having sex with underage members of the group. The cult leader also allegedly claimed to have at least 15 wives and believed all women in the world belong to him. * This article is based in part on wire service reports.
